For many years the country known as Oregon was in dispute between Great Britain and the United States, and was subjected to the terms of a treaty by which there was to be no occupation by either party. During that period many British subjects in the employment of the Hudson's Bay Company settled in the Northern part of the Territory, and many Americaus, under the projection of the Methodist Missionary Society, settled in the Southern part of the Territory. Those American settlers, in the valley of the Willamette, on the south side of the Columbia river, applied to Congress to establish a Territorial government for their protection. Congress denied their request, protection. Congress denied their request, protection. Congress denied their request, protection of law.
